British Defeat German Armored Unit in Tunisia

Drive for Tunis And Bizerte Now Well under Way

Germans and Italians Face Loss of Both Key Cities

Allied Forces Reach Coast of Mediterranean in Two Places

By E. B. SULLIVAN

LONDON, Monday, Nov. 23. (P)—Veteran British soldiers, who have fought German tanks before in Europe, have met and savagely mauled a Nazi armored column in Tunisia while their newly-gained French allies have stoutly beat down two German assaults on their positions, a communique from the North African front reported early today.

The official report gave further evidence of the rising tide of battle beating against the German and Italian hold on the Tunisian cities of Tunis and Bizerte. While these advance guards are feeling out the enemy, a steady stream of guns and tanks is flowing eastward for a decisive blow.

The communique, issued late last night at Allied force headquarters in North Africa, briefly described the action, which occurred Saturday, as follows:

Inflict Heavy Damage
"One of the British advance units inflicted heavy damage on a German armored column in Tunisia yesterday.

"French forces were attacked by the Germans in Tunisia. This French force is one of those which has disregarded a Vichy order not to oppose the Axis occupation of Tunisia. Two vigorous attacks were unable to break the French resistance in spite of relatively severe losses."

The communique also announced officially that French patrols are operating far to the rear of Axis advance positions and that American Flying Fortresses and pursuit planes shot down or destroyed nine German planes in a raid Saturday on the Tunis airport.

Chinese Airmen Raid Jap Centers

CHUNGKING, Nov. 22. (P)—Chinese airmen flying bombing planes loosed devastating raids today against Shensi, Yangtze river port in Hupeh province, and Shanyang, on the Han river thirty-five miles to the northeast, the official Central News agency reported tonight in a dispatch from a secret airbase.

Heavy concentrations of river barges and Japanese military establishments were reported set aflame at both these cities where violent fighting is in progress after the enemy initiated offensive operations.

Chinese troops captured three towns north of the Kwo river in Anhwei province and inflicted more than 500 casualties upon the Japanese in a sharp battle, the high command reported.

Vandenberg and Byrd To Demand Government Simplify Paper Work

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (P)—Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) today called for "a little more of faith" and "a little less of strait-jacket" by the government in its dealings with the people and announced that he and Senator Byrd (D-Va.) would introduce a resolution intended to simplify "the vast amount of so-called 'paper work' which national defense legislation now involves."

The resolution will direct the congressional economy committee which Byrd heads to investigate handling of reports and questionnaires in all government departments and to recommend remedial legislation for the next Congress meeting in January.

Little business will remain for the closing weeks of the present Congress after a Senate vote tomorrow which southerners confidently pre-

British Eighth Army 35 Miles From El Agheila

Tattered Rommel Forces Expected to Make Last Stand There

By STEPHEN BARBER

CAIRO, Nov. 22. (P)—Mobile armored formations of the British Eighth army pounding around the curving shores of the Gulf of Sirte today were reported thirty-five miles from El Agheila, which offers Marshal Rommel's whipped Africa corps its best chance to stand and fight it out east of Tripoli.

This was about midway between El Agheila and Agadabia, where the British overtook the Axis rearguard. Thus the Eighth army was maintaining the steady thirty-five-day clip maintained since the Germans and Italians took to their heels at El Alamein, some 725 miles to the east twenty days ago.

Even if Rommel does get to Tripoli he likely will be under Allied bombs, making any attempt at an escape by sea an adventure fraught with peril.

Tripoli Bombed
That he won't find any rest there was indicated by the going-over given Tripoli yesterday by American Liberators in the latest of a series of punishing blows.

U. S. Destroyer Sunk in Solomons

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (P)—The sinking of an additional American destroyer in the great naval battle of the Solomons the night of Nov. 14-15 was announced today by the navy, bringing the total of American losses in the action which smashed a Japanese invasion armada to two light cruisers and seven destroyers.

The officers and crew of the destroyer were rescued by another ship and no loss of life has been reported, a communique said.

Adolf and Benito Find Spaniards Tough Problem

Franco May Join Allies if He Is Attacked by Axis Forces

NEW YORK, Nov. 22. (P)—Hitler and Mussolini, turning reluctantly back toward the Spanish laboratory where they concocted the first totalitarian triumph of the European war, have found a new formula—neutrality—brewing inside the old test tube, reliable reports from Europe to the Associated Press said today.

Already, it is reported, Generalissimo Franco has given not only the Allies, but also the Axis, to understand that his neutrality is to complete that he will join the opposite side the minute either invades Spain or Spanish territory.

The British have announced that Nazi submarines have concentrated off the Spanish coast on the Atlantic side of Gibraltar. From France have come reports of a steady flow of German troops reinforcing the Pyrenean frontier garrisons. Italian submarines are said to have been thick recently off Spain's Balearic islands in the Mediterranean.

From these vantage points the Axis watches Spain, where its diplomats are trying to execute orders from Berlin and Rome. Their task is not easy.

Franco Not Puppet
General Franco and his civil war allies are by no means enemies today, but Franco Spain seems no longer a mere puppet, said the reports from Europe to the Associated Press.

Financially, Spain still owes Italy 5,000,000,000 lire (nominally some $260,000,000 at old exchange rates) for arms and ammunition furnished Franco's forces during the civil war, but Germany is in debt to Spain.

Since 1939 Germany has been a heavy buyer of Spanish merchandise.

Today Germany owes Spain somewhere between 60 to 70 million marks ($20,000,000 to $28,000,000). Spain needs German machinery and other German goods, but Germany has not been delivering much during 1942.

For the three years during the Spanish civil war German and Italian diplomacy and the propaganda worked hard for Franco.

Italy on Verge Of Panic, Many Dispatches Say

Cities Bombed and Crisis for Mussolini Seems at Hand

[By The Associated Press]

Facing complete disaster in Africa and possible invasion at home, their cities pounded and blasted by Allied bombs and policed by more and more German troops, Italians appeared on the verge of nationwide panic last night. Dispatches from half a dozen European cities all pointed to approaching crisis for the regime of Mussolini.

Italy, which went to war for a quick victory in 1940, appeared to be facing sudden defeat now. A total of 60,000 German "tourists" was reported infiltrating the peninsula to bolster collapsing morale while Propaganda Minister Alessandro Pavolini felt compelled to ask Italians voluntary to evacuate large cities if their presence in them was not imperative.

Aerial bombing experts in London surveyed photographs taken above Genoa after the raids of Nov. 15 and since, and declared the port has been made useless as an effective Axis supply channel for food to come. Milan and Turin have also felt the blows of British two-ton block-busters.

More Raids Likely

In Genoa alone, photos showed one patch of twenty-seven acres, another of twenty acres, completely burned out, while tonight air raid alarms were sounded again in Zurich and Basel, Switzerland, where in the past raid alarms usually have signaled passage of the RAF to more Italian objectives.

The British radio delayed reports from Switzerland which told of "thousands of refugees" streaming out of northern Italian cities, and reports in Ankara said the Germans were preparing a "second line of defense along the old Austro-Italian frontier."

With the flower of Italian arms already smashed or captured first in East Africa, now in Libya, with others forced into freezing front-line positions in Russia, and other Italian units apparently headed for capture or a costly evacuation from Tunis, talk was even spreading in Italy of evacuating Rome, accord- (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Bloc To Oppose Gas Rationing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (P)—A congressional bloc seeking postponement of the nationwide gasoline rationing Dec. 1 looked today to the House Interstate Commerce committee to develop evidence for an appeal to President Roosevelt.

The committee will open a two-day review of the problem tomorrow with representatives of the War, Navy and other departments as witnesses.

Congressmen saw little chance of shoving through legislation to delay the rationing and it was understood that the strategy of the group centered around an appeal to the president, probably Wednesday, for a postponement of at least a month.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 22. (P)—Today was just like any other day for Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell, often called "the world's richest woman," except that she collected another ten million dollars.

The third and final installment of her $30,000,000 legacy from the estate of her father, James B. Duke, came due today on her thirtieth birthday.

She spent the day quietly visiting friends living near her palatial estate at Duke Farms. Employees there said they did not know exactly where the heiress had gone.

Uncle Sam had his calling card in the hall, though. Agents of the United States treasury department were proceeding to take a sizeable share of the final installment in inheritance taxes.

Capture of Buna, New Guinea Base, Seems Imminent

American Forces Threaten Port from Three Directions

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 22. (P)—The capture of Buna, beleaguered Japanese invasion base in New Guinea, by United States forces is imminent, dispatches from the battlefield said tonight.

American forces were declared threatening the Japanese from three sides, possibly indicating the enemy communications to Gona, thirty-two miles to the northwest, had been severed by the Allies closing in upon the Japanese caught in a steadily constricting triangle with the sea to their backs.

A Japanese convoy with four destroyers was sighted about ninety miles north of Buna traveling at a high speed and a fleet of United States bombers swept out to sea in hot pursuit.

The dispatch failed to say in which direction the convoy was moving but earlier reports said Japanese warships had been maneuvering warily offshore presumably for a long-shot chance to land reinforcements or rescue survivors of the badly mauled Japanese garrison.

American Bombers Attack Airdrome
By DEAN SCHIEDLER
SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA Nov. 22. (P)—American dive bombers plowed up the Japanese airdrome at Buna yesterday during more than 100 Allied aerial sorties aimed at softening up the enemy base for a knockout blow from United States forces.

When the big army plane in which Rickenbacker was flying on an inspection trip for Secretary of War Stimson went down for lack of fuel on Oct. 21, the eight men on the plane took to the rubber life rafts.

Rafts Become Separated
The three rafts became separated the afternoon of Nov. 9, said Lieut. James C. Whitaker, 41, of Burlingame, Calif. Meanwhile, one of the party, Sgt. Alexander Kaczmarczyk of Torrington, Conn., had died and was buried at sea.

Whitaker said he and his raft companions, Lieut. John J. De Angellis of Nesquehoning, Pa., and Staff Sgt. James Reynolds of Fort Jones, Calif., sighted land Nov. 11, Wednesday, and they rowed for the island, wondering whether it was occupied by Japanese.

That same day, but out of sight of Whitaker and his party, Lieut. Eadie with radioman Lester Soule in his plane, sighted one of the rafts which was occupied only by Capt. William T. Cherry, of Abilene, Tex. Cherry had been the pilot of Rickenbacker's plane.

Eadie flew Cherry back to an island base, and the next day acting on information supplied by the rescued man, undertook search for the other survivors.

That night, with the aid of flares, Eadie located Rickenbacker's raft some forty miles from the island. Rain squalls swept the sea, and Eadie was afraid he'd be unable to (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Nazi Positions Imperilled in The Don Basin

Fourteen Thousand Germans Killed and 13,000 Captured

Soviet Forces Advance 38 to 44 Miles in Stalingrad Area

MOSCOW, Nov. 22. (P)—The Red army, falling upon the Germans in a mighty double offensive from above and below Stalingrad, has severed both railroads feeding supplies to the Nazis east of the Don river. A special Soviet communique announced today, in a brilliantly-executed maneuver which which gravely imperilled enemy positions in the whole of the Don basin and the Caucasus.

More than 14,000 Nazis were slaughtered and 13,000 captured by onrushing Soviet forces which advanced between thirty-eight and forty-four miles and occupied the town of Kalach, on the east bank of the Don about fifty miles west of Stalingrad, said the special announcement, broadcast by the Moscow radio.

7 Nazi Divisions Flee
In all, seven German divisions—six infantry and one tank—or perhaps 100,000 to 125,000 men were declared thrown into headlong flight. Eleven other divisions, seven infantry, two tank and two motorized, suffered heavy losses. The announcement added jubilantly: "The offensive by our troops continues."

The Red army entry into Kalach posted an immediate and dire threat to the rear of surviving German forces which have stormed futilely for more than two months at the granite-like bastions of Stalingrad itself.

News of this surprise blow to the invader followed an announcement earlier in the week of another major victory in which 6,000 Germans were slain at Ordzhonikidze by Russian forces smashing a Nazi thrust to the Georgian military pass through the Caucasian mountains.

Curiously, the announcement of the latest drive fell on the anniversary (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Compulsory Loans Planned by George

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. (P)—Compulsory loans to the government will top the agenda of the new Congress, Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Finance committee said today, adding that Congress should take the initiative in the matter if the treasury and other agencies are not ready with a program shortly after the first of the year.

"We have got to have compulsory loans to help finance the war and to guard against inflation and the sooner we get started on the problem, the better," George told interviewers.

There have been indications that James F. Byrnes, economic director, has taken a leading part in attempting to assemble a compulsory savings program which would have not only the backing of the treasury but the federal reserve, the budget bureau, the Office of Price Administration and other agencies directly interested in controlling inflation.

Davis Says Henderson Is Incapable Of Regulating The Prices of Coal

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Nov. 22. (P)—C. Prentiss Davis, United Mine Workers district 31 president, asserted in a published statement today that OPA Director Leon Henderson was inefficient and incapable of regulating prices, including coal.

Davis declared that the collapse of the six-day work week conference in New York between union officials and coal operators was due to lack of assurance of a "25 per cent increase" in the present coal ceiling.

Stating that the mine workers wanted to go ahead with the six-day schedule without waiting until costs and other details were worked out, Davis said "the operators were not willing to sign for the extra day at time and a half pay x x x until they had all the figures compiled."

"Some of the prices set by Henderson make it impossible for operators to make expenses," the UMW official declared, adding that "it takes Henderson six months to investigate prices and another six months for him to make up his mind what to do about them."

"Since they (the operators) were not willing to go ahead until they were certain a raise in the coal ceiling would be allowed, the United Mine Workers decided they might as well go home."

Davis also said Henderson "overstepped his authority in fixing coal prices." He said the Bituminous Coal Division was authorized by law to regulate the coal industry.

The stalemated conference, requested by Solid Fuels Administrator Harold L. Ickes, ended Wednesday with the mine workers authorized to make individual contracts with operators in several UMW districts.

Two Cooks Held In Mass Deaths In Ore. Hospital

Blamed for Placing Poison in Food of Asylum Inmates

SALEM, Ore., Nov. 22 (AP)—State police today arrested two cooks at the Oregon State Hospital for the insane, where forty-seven patients died last week of poisoning.

Under orders of District Attorney Miller Hayden, police held Mrs. Mary O'Hare, chief cook, in custody and placed A. B. McKillop, assistant cook, in jail. Both were arrested without warrants.

The district attorney said he was preparing a charge of involuntary manslaughter against McKillop, and a charge of obstructing public justice against Mrs. O'Hare.

The arrests followed all-night questioning in which State Police Captain Walter Lansing said the cooks admitted they sent a hospital patient to a basement storeroom to get powdered milk with which to prepare scrambled eggs.

The patient, identified as George A. Nosen, 27, Medford, Ore., who volunteered to enter the institution last August, went into the wrong storeroom, and brought back six pounds of roach powder, Lansing said.

The poison resembles powdered milk, and McKillop told Lansing he mixed it in the scrambled eggs without noticing the error.

Lansing said that amount of poison was sufficient to kill 12,000 persons. It made more than 400 patients ill, but because of the overdose many were nauseated and their lives probably saved thereby.

Lansing said after the patients became ill Mrs. O'Hare and McKillop asked Nosen to show them where he got the powdered milk.

Nosen led them to the can of roach powder, McKillop told Lansing, adding that they were afraid to talk after that.

Dr. John C. Evans, hospital superintendent, said "it was strictly against hospital rules for a patient to have a key to the storerooms." He said both cooks had been suspended.

Capture of Buna

ted States and Australian forces closing in from all land sides.

"With American troops poised to seize the airfield lying on the outskirts of Buna village, A-20 dive-bombers swept in from treetop level in repeated bombing and strafing attacks. Twelve tons of bombs and thousands upon thousands of rounds of ammunition were used in these and other assaults upon enemy defense positions.

Allied possession of the airfield would decimate the remaining strength of the badly depleted Japanese air force and apparently would seal the doom of the enemy's scant foothold.

Japanese Fighting Hard

The powerful, co-ordinated Allied land and air attack appeared today to revolve around four elements, the first of which is the struggle for the airfield, stubbornly defended by the Japanese with heavy mortars.

The others include:

1. An assault upon Buna proper by American forces pressing forward from several directions inland.

2. An attack upon Sanananda point nearby, where the Japanese are dug in with good natural defenses.

3. Australian patrol activity in the Gona mission area.

The Japanese struck back savagely and some of the fiercest fighting of the entire New Guinea campaign was raging in that obscure tropical setting. Gen. Douglas MacArthur is in personal command of the Allied forces, which yesterday had sent one strong column to within a mile of Buna.

Any hopes the cornered Japanese had of a getaway suffered a sharp setback by clearing weather, making it easier for Allied planes to spot any dash by enemy warships towards the shore.

Two Jap Planes Downed

The Japanese themselves were back in the air again after a long absence, and in Saturday dogfights two of their fighters were shot down.

Major Don Hall of Corpus Christi, Tex., led the dive-bombers yesterday, diving through intense heavy caliber anti-aircraft fire.

Their bombs silenced one ack-ack position with a direct hit and set off an explosion, apparently in an ammunition dump, in the woods east of the landing strip.

Other pilots participating in the day-long raids by the A-20's included Capt. Christian Pelt, Cleveland, O.; Glenn Clark, Seattle; Ed Larnier, San Francisco; and Lieuts. Roger Dunbar, Portland, Me.; and Bob Lyon, Waynesboro, N. C.

In coordinated attacks Billy Mitchell B-25 bombers led by Major Alex Ewanoff of Belle Plaine, Iowa, bombed and strafed the airfield and coastal areas.

The major pilots returning from their final mission of the day said the enemy anti-aircraft fire had developed into wild, inaccurate shooting of only moderate intensity.

Pilots of the Billy Mitchell—the same type bombers which bombed Japan last April 18—included Capt. Wesley Dickson, Dulworth, Minn.; Lieuts. Ray Johnson, Gloversville, N. Y.; Gordon McCoun, New York; David Conley, Wichita, Kas.; and Thomas Cline, Augusta, Ky.

Besides Buna, which the Japan-smoke, the mole was blown sky high and bombs were planted squarely in a warehouse. The Italians acknowledged some dead and injured from this raid.

Bad weather prevented Allied airmen from keeping up their deadly assaults on Rommel's remnants but British and American medium bombers got in some heavy hits against the Axis-occupied naval base at Bizerte in Tunisia, the first to be delivered by planes based in the middle east. Two German planes were shot down off Tunisia and an anti-aircraft ship damaged. Previous air blows against Tunisia from this direction had been delivered from Malta.

(Dennis Johnson, British Broadcasting Corporation correspondent in the Middle East, said in a broadcast heard in New York by CBS that snowfalls had been reported by Allied pilots operating in the El Aghela sector.)

Commenting on the possibility of the Axis forces making a stand at El Aghela on the thirty-mile-wide defile between the Mediterranean coast and the inland salt sinks, a British military commentator said:

Battle "In a Day or So"

"If the Axis armies still are planning to make a fight of it, it certainly will be at El Aghela and at the present rate of their retreat it will be in a day or so."

This informant, who could not be identified by name, said there was considerable evidence that the Nazis and Fascists were nearing exhaustion after legging it across north Africa at such a pace. He added however that Rommel apparently had received some tanks which had been left at rear line repair stations.

Air forces disclosed meanwhile an audacious maneuver pulled off to contribute to the rout of Rommel. This surprise tactic involved the ferrying of compact fighter groups, complete with ground crews and equipment, to airfields well behind the enemy lines.

These units were transported by transport plane and small ground convoys and enabled Allied fighters to strike deeply in the enemy's communications beyond normal straining range.

An incident illustrating the effectiveness of this operation occurred when a protection force of RAF armored cars came across a German soldier stranded in the desert walking in the wrong direction and nearly dead of thirst.

Surprise for the Germans

Shortly afterward, to the astonishment of this Nazi, the armored cars were overtaken by a transport plane fleet and when the ground force halted a few minutes later there were squadrons coming in to land while the ground men were busily setting up equipment, rations and ammunition landed by the transport craft.

The German had covered the same ground a few hours before and had been the sole living thing in that part of the desert, now transformed into a busy air base.

Some of the most damaging blows from these fields were against Axis troops who thought they were retreating through safe territory, only to be strafed unmercifully.

The air correspondent of the British press association reported the Axis has lost 24 planes in the middle east in the past week against Allied losses of 13.

ing New York, the Spaniards regard that debt paid.

Not only paid, but there have been tendencies to eliminate pro-Axis propaganda from Spain, due to the fear that what influence Spain still has in America may be lost if Spaniards insist upon hitching to a falling Axis star.

There remains what pro-Axis Falangists call "the blood debt"—the German and Italian casualties on Franco's side during the civil war.

Many Spaniards, it is reported, refuse to recognize this as a debt, saying the Axis casualties were natural losses in war training held for the benefit of the Axis on Spanish soil at Spain's expense.

Even pro-Axis Spaniards today consider the blood debt also paid in kind by the casualties of the Spanish Blue Legion "volunteers" now helping the Germans in Russia, it is reported.

The Spanish press has published the name of only a few hundred of the Legionnaires killed in action in Russia, but the Legion's total casualties are estimated in the thousands.

May Eliminate New State Bond Issue

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 22 (AP)—Governor O'Connor, after a series of conferences with state fiscal officials, said tonight he believed it would be possible to eliminate a new bond issue during the coming session of the legislature.

ese occupied last Aug. 23, Salamaw and Lae, seized farther up the coast, last March 8, are the main footholds held by the invader. An enemy excursion into Milne Bay, at the southeastern tip of New Guinea, four days after the Buna landing, ended in quick disaster for the Rising Sun.

The Buna fighting has been along a triangle, its base running along the irregular shore between Buna and Gona and its apex extending eight miles inland and pointing—implicitly now—toward the Allied base at Port Moresby, once threatened by the Japanese before they were sent reeling back across the Owen Stanley mountains.

America's Best Fighting Planes Active in Tunisia

Fortresses Raid German Airfield in Bizerte Section

By WES GALLAGHER

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NORTH AFRICA, Nov. 22 (AP)—America's best fighting planes, Fortresses and twin-engine P-38 Pursuits, in action together against German air force for the first time, struck a mighty blow for sky supremacy over Tunisia today in an air raid on an enemy airfield.

On the ground, British, American and French forces battered Nazi defenses around Bizerte and Tunis in at least five places.

Unconfirmed reports indicated that the Germans were trying to smash southward through French lines in order to establish contact with other Germans from Marshal Erwin Rommel's Axis army in Tripolitania, but had been beaten back.

Nine Nazi Planes Destroyed

The official announcement of the American air assault said at least nine German planes were destroyed and many more damaged.

"The Fortresses scored direct hits on hangars and started fires around Tunis airfield, destroying at least five German planes on the ground and probably destroying and damaging many more," a spokesman said describing the daylight attack which took place yesterday.

"The Fortresses were escorted by P-38 (Lockheed) Lightnings and on the way back they were attacked by Messerschmitt 109's," he continued. "The Fortresses shot down three of the attacking planes without a loss and the P-38's shot down another and drove the rest off."

It was the Fortresses' second attack in three days, but the first time the P-38's have been in action anywhere against the Germans.

Maj. Gen. James Doolittle's air force was in action on a large scale over Tunis for the first time, making a formidable addition to the RAF.

Fortresses Best in War

The Fortresses have proved themselves the kings of the air over Europe against the best Reichsmarshals Goering had to offer, and it was believed that the Germans or Italians were unlikely to be able to muster anything to stop them in this theater.

The performance of the P-38's also was taken as an indication that they are equal to the best that the Luftwaffe has to offer.

Ground clashes with Axis forces were developing on an increasing scale.

Field reports indicated these occurred at several points fanwise around the German defenses of Bizerte and Tunis.

The Germans have been trying to break through a pro-Allied French block across the center of Tunisia from both sides.

There were unconfirmed reports that a small German tank column advancing to the northwest had been beaten back with heavy losses by the French.

There were indications that more French garrisons in the strategically situated protectorate were swinging to the Allied side and fighting infiltrating Germans fiercely.

In one clash yesterday, pro-Allied French units suffered 100 casualties in attacking a German position.

ing to diplomatic channels tapped in Turkey.

As compensation for all her losses, Italy had only Corsica, Nice and Savoy, taken from prostrate France when the Nazis occupied the Vichy zone and held only on suzerainty of her Nazi overlords.

Das Reich, German publication, declared that as the front came nearer home to Italians, it would "make the Italian people harder."

Evacuation Advised

Propaganda Minister Alessandro Pavolini, in a speech to the Italian people last night advising them voluntarily to evacuate cities in danger of air attacks, predicted that the outcome of the African battle would be known in two weeks.

(In the broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, Pavolini said that the "Italians are not afraid; they are not a nation of 'fraidy-cats'—absolutely no.")

He said that while Italy remained "calm," the nation recognized that previous Allied advances in Africa were followed by Axis counter-offensives, but this time "a new army in the west is ready to march against the forces of the Axis," referring to American invasion troops in Algeria.

Pavolini said that while Italy grieved for the loss of her men and territory in Africa, much material was saved and the Allied nations could not speak of victory until they attained their objective of pushing all Axis forces out of Africa.

Das Reich said no effort was being made to disguise the situation for the Italian people, that news-reels of bombing damages were being shown throughout the nation so "everyone may arm his heart with the expectation of how tomorrow could strike him."

The paper said "confidence in the government was being shown by the people" in their reactions to the Axis occupation of the rest of France and landings in Tunisia.

Only the landings in Tunisia, said Das Reich, "relaxed the high tension Italians had felt since Nov. 15."

Allied Drive for Tunis and Bizerte Gets under Way on a Gigantic Scale

will be severe fighting before they are ousted."

Allies Reach Coast

He said that the Allied action around Bizerte is "growing heavier."

The Allied forces have driven a firm wedge across the narrow waist of Tunisia and reached the Mediterranean at two points.

Giving the Axis merely a taste of what is to come, American Flying Fortresses and twin-motored fighting planes which were flying against the Germans for the first time, struck a mighty blow from the west against Tunis airfield.

While waves of other American four-motored bombers, the Liberator B-24's, left a devastated trail at the Libyan base of Tripoli in attacks from the east. To complement the Allied aerial assault American and RAF medium bombers blasted at Bizerte from the east.

Germans Desperate

In desperation, it seemed, the Germans were reported endeavoring to infiltrate through Allied wedges driven through to Gabes and had been anchored on the Mediterranean only by pro-Allied French.

The Germans were said to be attempting to filter through in attacks both from the north and the south, probably to establish contact between their beleaguered Bizerte-Tunis forces and the remnants of Marshal Erwin Rommel in Libya.

Unconfirmed broadcasts from radio Morocco said German troops which had come from Tripolitania, where Marshal Rommel is struggling to escape with his Africa Corps, had infiltrated west of Gabes, while reports from Allied headquarters in North Africa said other Germans had attacked toward the south from the Bizerte-Tunis area.

The radio report said the French had routed and severely handled some of these small armored parties.

Meanwhile, the Americans and British were said in field reports received at their North African headquarters to have attacked the German-Italian arc of fortifications about thirty miles outside the naval base and capital in at least five different places.

Capture Rail Line

The radio report declared that Allied forces had captured the railway line northwest of Gabes, French-held seaport some 200 miles south of Tunis, and others were establishing a line from Sousse on the Mediterranean to Kairouan, two towns about eighty miles south and southeast of Tunis.

This was the first direct information received of the Allied southern drive, all eyes having been centered for the past week on the mounting fight for Tunis and Bizerte.

Tight-lipped Allied headquarters spokesmen were silent on the reported tactical victory, but information from other sources tended to confirm the radio announcement.

French sources believed that German detachments from Libya—possibly a vanguard of survivors of Marshal Rommel's routed Africa corps—had attempted to reach their comrades behind the Tunis-Bizerte fortifications before their line of retreat up the coast was cut off, and that this explained the German attack on the Tunis-Bizerte line.

Plans Not Revealed

A steady stream of Allied assault guns, tanks and troops was reported converging against the Axis lines, but there was no indication when Lieut. Gen. Anderson would give the word for the all-out assault.

The German radio reported that Axis bombers had raided Allied bases at Bougie, Bone and Philippeville in Algeria and had bombed coastal airfields.

American forces from as far as Casablanca on the Atlantic coast were reported to be moving eastward to join the final push against the Axis in North Africa.

Admiral Sir Andrew B. Cunningham, in command of Allied naval operations, said there had been a "definite slackening" of enemy submarine activity in the Mediterranean and expressed the opinion that the subs had been given a "good knock." He estimated that fifty Axis submarines were operating in the Mediterranean at the start of the North African campaign.

Cunningham, in command of Allied naval operations, said there had been a "definite slackening" of enemy submarine activity in the Mediterranean and expressed the opinion that the subs had been given a "good knock." He estimated that fifty Axis submarines were operating in the Mediterranean at the start of the North African campaign.

In that connection, it had been reported recently that Marshal Rommel was in Tunis, presumably perfecting plans to succor his shattered forces.

While Allied spokesmen were giving little official information concerning their land operations, they were not the least reluctant to tell of the damage their air forces were doing.

Maj. Gen. James "Jimmy" Doolittle's air forces in North Africa entered the battle on a large scale as America's flying Fortresses, escorted by twin-engine P-38 Lockheed lightning pursuit craft, battered an Axis airfield in Tunisia. Taking off to grasp command of North African skyways, the American planes scored direct hits on hangars and started many fires around Tunis airfield, an official spokesman reported.

Destroy 9 Nazi Planes

The Fortresses and fighters destroyed at least nine German planes, "probably destroying and damaging many more," in their daylight attack, a spokesman said. The P-38's were in action against German flyers for the first time.

At the other end of the huge Anglo-American pincers, American four-motored bombers operating with Lieut. Gen. Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth army in Libya, blasted Tripoli's harbor works and defense by day and by night in two waves of an all-American assault.

Liberator bombers of the ninth bombardment group braved anti-aircraft fire in a daylight attack, scored a direct hit on a warehouse and blew up parts of the harbor moles.

When the second wave came over Tripoli by moonlight the Americans could see a supply ship still blazing and smoking from the first bombing. It was in a sinking condition. Two more large fires were started, one apparently an ammunition dump since it flared repeatedly.

TOOK OVER COMMAND

During the recent large-scale naval battle in the Solomons, Lieut. Comm. Bruce McCandless, 31, was wounded and knocked unconscious. When he came to, his senior officers on the San Francisco had been killed. In spite of his injuries, he took over command of the United States cruiser and piloted her safely into port. This is an official United States Navy photo.

the event he attempted to make a stand at El Aghela.

Bizerte Tough Problem

Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, former commander in chief of the Free French navy, predicted here that the Allies would find it "virtually impossible to dislodge the Germans from Bizerte except by siege with an overwhelming force" if the Axis became well established there.

But he estimated the Axis would need between 20,000 and 30,000 troops to man the defense of the great French naval base properly.

The Bizerte batteries, he said, had a range of twenty-five miles, and he described the landward defenses as "very strong."

"When I left Tunisia there were nearly 20,000 tons of ammunition and stores in underground depots," he said, "and it may still be there."

Admiral Muselier was commander of naval forces at Bizerte from 1932 to 1937, but since he left there five years ago, German and Italian armistice commissions have been in Tunisia and are reported by some sources to have done a thorough job of dismantling the defenses and removing the ammunition so that the French could not oppose an Axis occupation.

Reuters news agency reported that the Axis still was landing airborne reinforcements at Bizerte. It said also that Allied shock troops had captured an important road junction west of Tunis, apparently outside the main ring of Axis fortifications.

Plans Not Revealed

A steady stream of Allied assault guns, tanks and troops was reported converging against the Axis lines, but there was no indication when Lieut. Gen. Anderson would give the word for the all-out assault.

The German radio reported that Axis bombers had raided Allied bases at Bougie, Bone and Philippeville in Algeria and had bombed coastal airfields.

American forces from as far as Casablanca on the Atlantic coast were reported to be moving eastward to join the final push against the Axis in North Africa.

Admiral Sir Andrew B. Cunningham, in command of Allied naval operations, said there had been a "definite slackening" of enemy submarine activity in the Mediterranean and expressed the opinion that the subs had been given a "good knock." He estimated that fifty Axis submarines were operating in the Mediterranean at the start of the North African campaign.

In that connection, it had been reported recently that Marshal Rommel was in Tunis, presumably perfecting plans to succor his shattered forces.

While Allied spokesmen were giving little official information concerning their land operations, they were not the least reluctant to tell of the damage their air forces were doing.

Rangoon, Mandalay And Toungoo Are Heavily Bombed

American and British Flyers Attack Jap-Occupied Burma

NEW DELHI, Nov. 22 (AP)—The biggest formation of United States bombers ever sent into the air from an Indian base teamed up with the RAF to cascade many tons of bombs upon Rangoon, Mandalay and Toungoo, major cities in Japanese-occupied Burma, during weekend raids which cut wide swaths of fire destruction through enemy targets.

A British communiqué, issued simultaneously with one from American headquarters, emphasized the "increased scale" of aerial operations in this theater, indicating that more such blows could be expected. The resurgence of Allied activity recalled recent talk of an invasion of Burma to free that vital link in the land supply route to China.

American pilots of the Tenth Air force set the pace in a Friday night assault on Mandalay, unloading ton upon ton of explosives on railway yards, repair shops and a big warehouse. They encountered only weak and ineffective enemy aircraft and not a single challenging enemy plane.

Like the British raiders, they all came home safely.

The RAF concentrated last night on the Mingaladon airfield at Rangoon, the Burmese capital and chief port, and Toungoo, 150 miles up the Mandalay railway.

Both medium and heavy British bombers participated, losing thousands of pounds of explosives squarely on their targets. Airfield runways were hit and fires, two of them visible for 100 miles, were started in the dispersal and hangar area.

Failure To Aid Russia Explained

Supplies Sent to North Africa, AP Expert Declares

By WILLIAM F. FRYE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nothing more has been heard since the North African offensive started of the United States "failure" to deliver promised supplies and equipment to Russia, and with good reason.

The plain truth is that the promised supplies never reached their original destinations but it seems unlikely that the Russians could have been ignorant of the reasons. And it is not beyond the realm of possibility that Stalin's pointed remarks on the subject were part of a deliberate campaign to confuse the enemy, even at the expense of some minor misunderstandings at home.

For those supplies went to Egypt. The plans for a joint British-American campaign in North Africa, to squeeze Marshal Erwin Rommel's forces in the west that seems now to be about to crush the Axis army in Libya, already were far advanced when the German leader uncorked his offensive that sent the British reeling back to El Alamein.

Supplies for British

To stave off disaster—because it looked as though Rommel might hammer through to Alexandria and the Suez—this country threw every available piece of equipment into reinforcement of the British in Egypt.

Major Gen. Lewis H. Brereton's air force in India was shifted almost in its entirety to Egypt. The Japanese in Burma did not discover the move until India had been reinforced and it was too late for them to take advantage of it.

Shipments of heavy equipment, including large numbers of tanks, already enroute to Russia were rerouted and hustled to Egypt. Even some newly-organized armored divisions of the U. S. Army had their equipment taken away from them to be placed aboard special trains and rushed to embarkation ports, where ships scheduled for other runs were pressed into emergency service to Alexandria.

Pays Big Dividends

The move, obviously, is paying big dividends, and with Hitler with-

Tuberculosis, a Public Health Problem, Must Be Attacked as Such, Doctor Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Chadwick in "The Modern Attack on Tuberculosis" outlines a program for the eradication of tuberculosis as follows: "First, a median profession interested in the problem and familiar with modern methods of diagnosis and treatment."

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

But Rommel remains in Libya, and despite the retreat his army has made, losing most of its tanks along the route, there is probably a lot of fight left in it and it is expected to show it in the defile at El Aghella. There, in all probability, Rommel can hold the British at bay for a while, just as the British held him in the somewhat similar corridor at El Alamein.

His ultimate complete defeat, through the destruction of his army, seems inevitable. But it may well take considerable time, and the blow at the continent may not come until spring.

Patriotic To Be Thrifty, States Dr. Garry Myers

Parents Should Encourage Children To Invest in War Savings

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Ever so many youths who should be in high school are getting jobs. Except the few who have special talents in industry and a still smaller group who hardly could profit from further school attendance, these youths would do a more patriotic service to their country by staying in school and studying.

While some youths on purely patriotic grounds quit school to go to work, most of them do so for very selfish reasons. They want money. Until recently, a leading motive was a car. With that limited by rationing, many youths leaving school to work will lavish money on fine clothes and various sorts of amusement.

There can be no doubt that the recent increase in juvenile delinquency is related somewhat to the large amount of money working youths, even their parents, are spending on luxuries and wild times. Many working youths are saving nothing, not buying saving stamps and bonds, nor even paying their parents for board.

The youth who quits school to work would be so much safer morally if he could be induced to save and invest a large part of his earnings in war savings.

Schools Encourage Saving

The public schools have done exceedingly well in stimulating children to buy war saving stamps and bonds but the efforts and good results have been far better in the elementary schools than in the high schools. Nevertheless the older child at school the more he should be encouraged there and at home to invest in war savings.

I wish all leaders of youth clubs and organizations in schools and churches would emphasize more the value of self-denial through thrift as a worthy trait and patriotic duty.

Let me entreat my fellow parents who have young children to begin now to cultivate thrift in them and not to spend so much on them for their whims nor give them nearly all they desire. As soon as the child begins to spend money let him receive it sparingly and at regular intervals. As you develop an allowance with him, require that a definite portion of it be set aside for war savings stamps and bonds. In most homes this should come first in Christmas shopping.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Do you have some home helps for poor readers?
A. Yes; please indicate the age of your child or youth. Part I is for children of the first four grades; Part II for those above. Any one may receive without cost either or both by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

freely available to all physicians in a community and to the health department, regardless of the patient's ability to pay. Third, and equally important, a well-organized active health department with complete family records of all cases, and a public health nursing service capable of teaching preventive measures in the home and maintaining effective contact between patient, doctor, and health department.

Public Health Problem

This indicates that tuberculosis is very largely a public health problem, with which conclusion everyone, I think, will agree. A great deal of the work, however, is being done by representatives of the National Tuberculosis Association and this work is financed by the sale of Christmas seals each year. A very small amount of money spent by everyone who is able to buy a few leaves of these seals, and that includes nearly everybody in the United States today, will assure your community of an intelligent attack upon tuberculosis during the coming year.

Remember that during war years the necessity for tuberculosis control increases rather than decreases and the need for funds and for active preventive work is greater than under normal conditions. In Germany the tuberculosis death rate rose from 143 per 100,000 in 1914 to 230 in 1918. In the United States the rate increased from 147 per 100,000 in 1914 to 150 in 1918. Let us see to it that this record is not repeated during the present war if it is possible to prevent such a repetition by buying one dollar's worth of Christmas seals.

There are good psychologic and economic reasons why tuberculosis control must be active rather than left to the initiative of the individual.

The psychological factor involved is that tuberculosis is an insidious disease which develops very slowly—usually without dramatic symptoms—that frighten the patient or make him go to a doctor.

It also notoriously leaves the patient rather cheerful. Every tendency is for the patient to put off an examination for slight ill health such as weakness, gradual loss of weight, chronic cough, pallor, anemia and a little afternoon fever.

Economic Factor

The economic factor augments this because the modern examination for tuberculosis involves an x-ray, which the patient often refuses because it is too expensive.

This is exactly what happened in the old days before tuberculosis case-searching was instituted in our enlightened communities. When we depended upon the sick person to come in and have an examination, we found in ninety-nine cases out of 100 that he came in too late and there were too many cases that did not come in at all.

Questions and Answers

J. H. M.: How are the body cells and nerves related?
Answer: I presume you really do not want an anatomical answer to your question. I assume that you wish to know what the relation of bodily ills is to mental states. This is very close; the mind always affects the body, whether there is organic or functional disease present and emotional states or habits of thought can at times create symptoms which often imitate organic disease.

Shipping Progress Is Encouraging

SHIPPING is much in the news these days. The highlight of course is the giant armada that bore the American and British invasion forces to Africa. It was as big a surprise to Americans as it must have been to the Axis to learn that such an array of shipping could be assembled—500 transport and cargo ships conveyed by more than 350 naval vessels.

The Allies have made such a point of transport difficulties in answering Stalin's demand for a second front that Hitler seems to have underestimated the magnitude of the fleet assembled at Gibraltar. At any rate, it eclipsed all other sea movements in history and indicated the tremendous superiority of the United Nations over the Axis in this category.

That this superiority will be maintained and increased is practically guaranteed in the report of Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission and head of the War Shipping Administration, that American shipyards not only will reach the 8,000,000 tons of new construction asked by President Roosevelt for 1942 but also will achieve the 14,000,000-ton goal designated for 1943.

Let Hitler read those figures and ponder, particularly as another report shows that the toll taken by enemy submarines of Allied shipping is on the decline. The problem is being solved from both ends—sinkings are being reduced and ship production is being increased.

Henry J. Kaiser's latest exploit in delivering a vessel in less than days after construction was begun seems incredible even to Americans, and Hitler's comment no doubt would be unprintable. The war news is getting better, and when the miracles of American production now getting into high gear make their presence felt on the battlefields the Axis will be blasted to rubble.

Axis Strategy A Boomerang

AN ADVANTAGE reaped upon by the Axis to be controlling in this war has become a boomerang. This was the strategy of multiple fronts with which first Hitler, then Mussolini and finally Japan sought to confuse and confound the Allies.

By engaging or threatening to engage the Allies at many points the Axis attempted a new application of the old formula of dividing to conquer. Hitler's numerous aggressions throughout Europe were part of this Axis campaign. Part of it also was Mussolini's fantastic foray into Greece and the costly challenge in North Africa. Part of it, too, was Japan's sudden descent upon almost everything in the Southwest Pacific open to attack.

Now, with a switch of initiative to the United Nations, every one of these widely scattered fronts becomes a liability to the Axis and the lot of them is loaded with catastrophe.

Today Hitler does not know where the Allies will strike next—Norway, Denmark, the Low Countries, Northern France, Southern France, Italy, Greece. It is not for him now to feint at one point and strike at another. That edge is now held by the Allies.

In a similar pattern, the tables are slowly turning on Tokyo. Japan struck at the East Indies, the Aleutians, Burma and China to confuse and dismay the United Nations. Today, baffled at the border of India, Tokyo is watching nervously not only the Solomons, but the Aleutians, Burma and China, fearful of a new blow on any front.

THE MOVEMENT in Congress to force the recall of Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell as governor of Puerto Rico is gratifying in view of the miserable failure of his stewardship there. The House committee on Agriculture, by a vote reported to be virtually unanimous, has amended a bill appropriating an additional $15,000,000 for relief of the islanders to provide that none of the money may be used for the purpose specified as long as Tugwell remains in charge.

It was hoped that Dr. Tugwell, who may be a top ranker as a visionary dreamer but who is undoubtedly a costly failure as an administrator, had been shelved where he could cause no more trouble or expense when he was shifted to Puerto Rico. Certainly he did enough damage while acting in other capacities at home, for of all the New Deal depression socialization experiments, that of the Rural Resettlement Administration under his management was probably the most conspicuous of the many wasteful failures. Nothing of value remains whatever to show for the half billion of taxpayers' money he was permitted to squander on his grandiose dreams and now it has been disclosed that for sixteen months he has made a similarly wasteful mess in Puerto Rico. This man is entirely too costly to be allowed anywhere in governmental capacity, and he should be permanently retired to the academic cloisters.

Some Timely Thoughts On Christmas Gifts

SOME SAY it is a wholly self-seeking world, with "the devil take the hindmost" the general motto. But for a short period of the year the devil is requested to go way back and sit down, while people do a little thinking about conferring happiness on their friends by means of Christmas gifts.

Some persons say that the custom is overdue, that many people give more than they can afford, that many gifts are unsuitable. Yet the underlying idea represents unselfishness.

The most successful givers of Christmas gifts are those who go to pains to find out what their friends want. Articles of aesthetic appeal are not taboo as gifts. There are many people who would be cheered and encouraged by some pleasing decoration for their homes or for themselves. A gift of that type might throw a ray of sunshine into otherwise dull and drab lives.

Shopping for gifts will be more difficult this year unless it is accomplished earlier than usual. Christmas stocks have been put on display weeks ahead of the customary day and, while stores have a variety of goods today, they will in most cases be unable to restock and shelves may look pathetic the week before Christmas.

A Tide Is Rising In Crumbling Italy

AS ITALY CRUMBLES, Germany is making frantic efforts to keep it in the war. The blitz by the American army in North Africa, and the British smashing of Rommel were a double Caporetto for Italy. Mussolini is reported to be in mortal fear of his life. This swaggering bully, who gave his least opponents castor oil and who confined the strongest of them to island torture chambers, no longer can face his victims. German Gestapo agents guard him to prevent his self-destruction. But there is in Italy a rising tide of rage which portends a repetition of the startling events of 1848.

In a gesture of appeasement to Italian pride, Italian troops have been permitted to occupy French Corsica and also Nice and a bit of the French Riviera. This does not fool the Italian people, and it only enrages the French. The Italians are not so dumb as to think they will get something out of this war.

Today's fable: Once upon a time there was an amateur hunter who could tell at a glance the difference between a cow and a rabbit.

It's a good bet that the beer in that well-known Munich Nazi rathskeller has turned pretty flat by now.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Remember "Whistle Stop," that amazing story that young Maritza Wolff wrote while still in college a few years ago? A strange story of perversity and violence, almost too knowing to be the product of a youngster's brain, but the first revelation of an unusual talent. Well, she has written a second novel, a long, closely written story of life in an industrial city. "Night Shift" she calls it, and Random House publishes it. And again the reader will be bewildered by the powers of invention and observation that are almost unique in Miss Wolff.

The story moves around the personalities of two sisters: Sally Otis, a lovely spirit, married, with three children, an insane husband in a hospital many miles away, hardworking, patient and loyal. Her sister, Petey, large and beautiful, flamboyant but generous, and restive in any harness, but fascinating. Petey, enveloped in silver fox furs comes to town and immediately assumes a spot in the night life of the town—and into the story comes Nicky Torsca, a cruel gangster type who operates a night club and Petey's strange lover Sam. The tale is a kaleidoscope of workers' lives, hospital scenes, night club settings, violence and murder and quiet resignation.

In these pages Miss Wolff's talent burns most brilliantly. The book has serious defects and upon occasion Miss Wolff's passion for detail checks the swift rush of her story, but she has the same drive that made many, including the Browser, anticipate more than they ever received from the vast and stormy Thomas Wolfe.

In all California the Browser's favorite section is that wild stretch of coast from the mouth of the Russian River to Port Ross where the Russians lived for a third of a century and fifty miles beyond. It has a rough and untamed quality not possessed by the quieter valleys or even by the more familiar Sierra country—and the tourists never go there. But now Ruth Eleanor McKee has chosen this region as the setting for her novel "Storm Point" (Doubleday Doran), the tale of a girl and her wild family, who went from it to live for four years at the University of California and then returned to bear her child in the wild country where her heart was at peace. In some respects Miss McKee's characters fall in to the old Wuthering-Heights patterns of terror and morbidity but she brings them to life—and her chapters on the "Berkeley intellectuals" are particularly acute and observing.

Peter Rainier's "Green Fire" (Random) is a book of emerald hunting in Colombia, a war with a bandit chief, prospecting for gold. A bit "high" in tone, romantic as only the British can be, and probably all true. Rainier is now a major on the General Staff of the Army of the Nile.

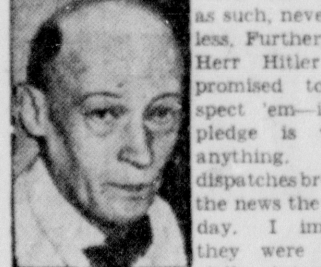

Mignon G. Eberhart's "Wolf in Man's Clothing" is up to her standard, which means that it is very good indeed. Nurse Keate, who was in "The Patient in Room 18" is in this one. (Personally, the Browser prefers more humor in his whodunits, which is why he prefers Virginia Rath to Mignon.) . . . And that's enough for this week from Marshall Maslin.

Miniature Nation Adjoining France Still Independent

By CHARLES F. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON — Andorra now introduces itself into the war picture. It does so as a neutral, but as a neutral that's determined to enforce its rights as such, nevertheless.

Charles F. Stewart

Force its rights as such, nevertheless. Furthermore, Herr Hitler has promised to respect 'em—if his pledge is worth anything. Press dispatches brought the news the other day. I imagine they were especially interesting to me, because I'd guess that I'm about the only citizen of the United States who ever crossed Andorra, from frontier to frontier, with a stopover at Andorra la Vieja, the capital.

Andorra la Vieja means Andorra the Old.

The burg is elderly, for a fact.

Survival a Mystery

The Andorran republic was established by Charlemagne, back in the 1200's A. D., and its metropolis was venerable even then. What sticks me is how the wee nation has succeeded in retaining its separate identity ever since. It's a little 17 by 18-mile stretch between France's southern and Spain's northern borders along the Pyrenees, with mountain ranges both ways, and I suppose it wasn't considered worth fighting for.

It isn't like Portugal, on the western Spanish coastal seacoast. That at least has a window on the outside world. Andorra is corked up tight. That more than nine folk out of every 100 ever heard of it I have my doubts.

That it's maintained its status as an independent republic for going on into eight centuries remains as a fact, all the same.

Governed by Syndicate

The Andorrans are run by an elected body known as a syndicate, to express it, in English, with a chosen head called a syndic—in effect a president.

Following a visit in Spain many years ago, and bound backward toward London through France, I had the curiosity for a stopover in this land of Charlemagne's creation, and a look at its civilization. Rail transportation being lacking, I made the trip in an apology for an automobile. I interviewed the syndic, but what he said to me is immaterial at this late date.

The nub was, though, that those Andorrans were as independent as hogs on ice.

They seem so yet. The Germans, bustling into Bichy, France, and getting uncomfortably close to the Andorran border, evoke from the Andorran capital the query, "Aren't you Nazis overdoing matters?"

Pushing Not Fancied

And the Nazis apparently don't fancy pushing 'em too far.

The Spanish peninsula isn't overly pro-German.

Andorra's so small as to be rather a funny symptom in the southwestern European diagnosis. I mention it as a curiosity rather than that it signifies with its city-block of population.

The Peninsula's Spanish, Portuguese and Andorran.

The Spanish are ruled at present by Francisco Franco, a so-called Caudillo, who corresponds to Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini, as Fuehrer and Duce.

Fuehrer Hitler still hangs on.

So does Duce Mussolini, though he shows definite signs of weakening.

I think Generalissimo Franco would remain totalitarian if he believed he could get away with it, but he's insisting on neutrality now—getting off the fence on to democracy's side.

Anarchy in Spain

Majoritatively speaking, Spain's pro-popular government is close to the point of anarchy. It's almost too much so. Italy verges that way. Now we have the Spanish and Italian peninsulas included generally.

Portugal and Andorra are rational little republics.

Heaven knows how they happen.

LED TASK FORCE

Rear Adm. Lee

According to the Navy Department, a task force led by Rear Adm. William Augustus Lee, Jr., sank one battleship or heavy cruiser, three large cruisers, and a destroyer in the Solomons. Details of the battle are lacking at present, but it is believed that these Jap ships add to the impressive total already announced. This is an official United States Navy photo.

Poll Tax Repeal Fight Not Understood And Wrong in Method, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—From the galleries, the Senate filibuster may have appeared to some to be a great struggle over the voting rights of the negro minority, but on the floor, where the participating senators stood, it fell far short of that.

I don't believe there are many kind of folk who recognize that there are THREE governments south of that squeeze in the Spanish peninsula.

And there's this to be recalled—For years back, there have been Frenchmen who have believed in a close Franco-German affiliation. It's no new idea. It ante-dates the last world war by a generation.

It's no modern invention by Paris's up-to-date fixers. It's left over from muddling ancient history.

It shouldn't be forgotten that Franco-English friction existed a heck of a while into past centuries. Some of these Frenchmen seem to feel it sizzling in their systems today, just as we might, if we allowed ourselves recollections of Revolutionary war days.

History Teaching In the Schools

From the Pittsburgh Press

Understanding the problems of today is a complicated matter at best. Planning intelligently for an uncharted future is one of the most difficult and challenging tests this nation and its people ever have faced. But to attempt to do either without a thorough knowledge of the past experience of mankind—particularly the history of our own country—is, we believe, an utterly useless effort.

Recently we published a series of articles by Douglas Naylor on the teaching of history in the public schools. Some persons quoted by Mr. Naylor held that not enough American history, in particular, is taught. Others disagreed, insisted pupils are getting plenty of it.

Some of those engaging in the controversy complicated it by introducing a lot of pedagogical terms and angles which usually are meaningless to the layman, perhaps intentionally. But, cutting through the technicalities, we didn't see the claim by anyone that too much history is being taught, or hear the argument that history should not be taught.

Isn't it just possible then that educators who contend that just precisely the right amount of American history is given school pupils (not too little and not too much) are treading on thin ice? Mastery of history is not so prevalent a characteristic as to make their case self-evident. In fact, ignorance of history among many people we know is no less than colossal.

Consequently, we hope the pedagogues will not dismiss too lightly the current intrusion of the public upon their private domain. The public has a right to be apprehensive about such a matter, particularly in view of the critical era upon which we have entered. Before those who make such decisions rule irrevocably against offering more history, or improving the courses in history, we hope there'll be some prayerful consideration given the argument of those who believe there's room for improvement.

Others professed to see the Democratic party riding two horses going in opposite directions, with the obvious results of such a disaster unavoidable in the future.

The southerners talked of getting a new party and a new Senate leader (one actually wanted to elect the Republican leader, McNary, on the ground that he represented true Democratic principles more adequately than Barkley).

The southerners preferred to believe the rumor that the only reason they were faced with this bill was because Mr. Roosevelt had promised CIO's Phil Murray to bring it forward, and thus aid the CIO drive to organize negro workers.

They rejected the similarly unconfirmed rumor that Mr. Roosevelt was dismayed at the spectacle and was getting his best political mechanic, the economic stabilizer, Jimmy Byrnes, to stabilize the riot in the Senate.

Barkley under Orders

But there will be no new party and no new leader. No one really believed Barkley was doing anything

More Information For Draft Boards Is Seen as Need

By DAVID LOWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—President Roosevelt disclosed to his press conference that he fully realizes the lack of uniformity among the local draft boards in handling occupational deferments.

The president's frank discussion of the draft situation is the most encouraging piece of news on this tangled problem that has come out of Washington in a long time, and amounts to a confirmation of the points made at various times in these dispatches concerning the operation of the Selective Service act.

Mr. Roosevelt referred first to what he observed on his recent inspection trip. He said that there were some operations in a factory, for example, which do not need a lot of skilled workers—in other words, that you could teach a girl to do such work in three or four weeks. Then a man holding such a job could not be deferred, but if a girl could not be obtained or taught that kind of work, the job holder would be deferred.

Example Is Cited

Then, there are the cases of two foremen in one of the plants visited by the president. He said they were not only skilled but they were in charge of twenty-five to thirty machines—they not only had the managing skill and knew all about machines but they also had leadership. Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that these two men happened to live in different ends of town. One had a wife but no dependents. The draft board gave the men in the north end of the town an exemption but did not give an exemption to the other fellow, and the two cases were almost similar in every respect.

The president added that there was no uniformity but that the government was doing the best it could under the circumstances and that probably later, when the next steps are taken, it may be possible to get some uniformity from the draft boards.

Consultation Advised

A further suggestion came from the president, namely, that by having the manager of the plant or supervisor of a particular kind of work certify to the board as to whether a man is irreplaceable, some uniformity might be obtained. He declared that he didn't think we had enough of that kind of co-operation and that the local boards do not consult enough with the managements of businesses as to their personnel training practices but that the situation was getting better all the time.

What the president may not know is that members of some local draft boards do not even acknowledge letters from employers, and some do not grant hearings at all, simply declaring that hearings are optional and not mandatory. Some members of local draft boards, when presented with the facts concerning key employees, ask this question: "Well, what would you do if the man died?" On that basis, of course, everyone can be replaced but it also means that training new employees slows up the work for a year or more until such time as skills are attained equal to that of the man drafted.

Appeal Boards

In the last war there were regional appeals boards which handled occupational deferment problems almost entirely, and this permitted of more co-ordination and more familiarity with employer-employee problems than is possible under the system today.

The local draft boards are overworked and are understaffed. They operate in inadequate quarters, and someone who has access to billions for lend-lease might well have done a bit of lending or leasing inside the United States to enable these draft boards to function more smoothly. Their clerical staffs are inadequate and their facilities insufficient. The draft system should have the benefit of experienced personnel men attached to the regional or district appeals boards.

The president seemed to think that many appeals would be avoided if, as he said, more information were given to the local boards. It is doubtful whether he knows efforts of employers to inform the local boards and of the indifference of such boards, in many instances, to written or oral information furnished.

More Information Needed

The president is right in saying the present arrangement lacks uniformity and that evidently more information is needed to act on deferment cases. It is true, of course, there has been some chiseling and some draft-dodging and even some untrue information given by employers, but in the main the local boards have been given no specific instructions by the national headquarters that they could apply uniformly.

Also they haven't had the technical facilities to handle the occupational deferment problem. Maybe in the coming new plan something will be done about this.

The comedian, known as Phil Baker's stooge, makes his first personal appearance in Cumberland. None other than Joe Morris, known to millions of radio fans.

"Spices of 1943" offers many more top-notch entertainers, such as the Woodson family, known as Hollywood's famous family. Danny Woodson recently completed a picture with Bing Crosby and Carl Woodson a recent picture starring Shirley Temple.

Another act, known to many Cumberlanders is Francis Renault in "The Slave of Fashion," in which he displays a twenty thousand dollar wardrobe. You will remember him as the featured star with Ziegfeld.

Many other acts included in Count Berni Vici's revue are Yost's Singing Co-Eds; the Van Gronas; Chaz and Chase; Ross and Pierre; Barr and Estes and featuring some of the world's prettiest girls.

On the screen will be "Destination Unknown," with William Gargan and Irene Hervey.

"Forest Rangers" Has Top Stars, Thrills

Telling its thrilling love story in fiery technicolor, Paramount's powerful romance of America's far-flung timberlines, "The Forest Rangers," is now showing at the Strand theater with Fred MacMurray, Paulette Goddard and Susan Hayward heading the star-studded cast. Others on the stellar list include Lynne Overman, Albert Dekker, Eugene Palette, Regis Toomey and Rod Cameron.

Directed by George Marshall from a story by Thelma Strabel, author of "Recap the Wild Wind," this latest drama of the great outdoors glorifies the men of the United States Forest Service, the intrepid Rangers who guard one of the nation's most vital natural resources, our forests. Plentifully supplied with comedy and exciting adventure, "The Forest Rangers" is outstanding for its musical numbers, including the Hit Parade tune, "Jingle, Jangle, Jingle," by Frank Loesser and Joseph Lilley, and "Tall Grows the Timber," by Loesser and Frederick Hollander.

"The Forest Rangers" is one of those rare films that just had to be made in technicolor to bring out the colorful and eye-filling timberland scenes and the thrilling forest fire sequences, said to be the most exciting and spectacular fire scenes ever filmed. Technicolor cameramen, working with Rangers of the Forest Service, ranged over most of the Pacific slope to get actual fire shots.

Ralph Byrd Was Born To Wear Uniforms

It looks like Ralph Byrd just can't keep out of a uniform. The handsome young star of Producers Releasing Corporation's "Duke of the Navy," which is coming tomorrow to the Embassy theater looks so good in uniforms, that casting directors, with an eye toward female theater patronage, are beginning to think of Byrd the minute a uniform is mentioned.

For instance, in "Duke of the Navy" in which he wears the whites of a United States goby, Byrd made a tremendous hit with the ladies according to the cards filled in by the fans at a special sneak preview of the film in Glendale, California.

Before that, in such uniformed epics as "Navy Blues," "Yank in the R.A.F.," "Drums of the Desert" and a dozen others, Byrd has scored solidly with the women of the country, on the basis of fan mail received at the various studios.

Not that Byrd objects to uniforms either. Recently, in Alexander Korda's "Jungle Book," he went around in an old bed sheet and a turban and nearly caught pneumonia.

Others in the cast of "Duke of the Navy" are Veda Ann Borg, Stubby Kruger, Val Stanton, Paul Bryar and Sammy Cohen.

South Africa Grows Small Amount of Rubber

DURBAN (AP)—South Africa will produce its own rubber to the extent of several hundred tons annually, according to Major J. R. F. Stratford, Union Controller of Rubber. The government has been experimenting with the Landolphia vine.

and private interests with Euphorbia. Landolphia is a common source of African rubber. Euphorbia, according to Webster's, is a "large genus of cactus-like plants . . . several trees producing caoutchouc." The rubber, says Major Stratford, is of high quality, not much inferior to the best Malaysian plantation production, and "the problem of collection and separation has been pretty well solved."

Naturally, he added, production costs are high, and production will not be anything like sufficient for the Union's needs, "but it will help."

Priests Address Catholic Students At Meeting Here

Vocation Is Subject of Talks by Fathers Russo and McKeown

The general idea of a vocation was outlined by the Rev. Francis J. McKeown, assistant pastor of St. Patrick's church, in addressing the members of the Lady of Good Counsel Club, comprising members of the Western Maryland Conference of the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, yesterday afternoon in the social center of Catholic Girls Central high school.

Father McKeown made a comparison of the interest shown in the lives of the heroes of the war of other lands and often overlooking the fact that the lives of the sisters and priests are unusual in many different respects. He illustrated by the general tendencies to look to Hollywood for the characters in the movies or story book, pointing out that the interest found in their lives is paralleled in the varied and interesting lives of the sisters and priests everywhere, particularly the missionary.

Father McKeown then introduced the Rev. Father Russo who stressed the importance of having an ideal and how necessary it is as far as a vocation and every day life is concerned.

Father Russo told of the habits and customs of the Chinese and the difficulties the sisters and priests have in adapting themselves to the life of the Chinese people. He also stressed the economic and social differences in the American and Chinese way of living and went on to show the value of a vocation club.

He urged the members to help with their prayers but mostly by seeing everything in life is worthwhile, for as long as they have an ideal it is "worth fighting for."

The program opened with the singing of "Santa Maria," by a chorus of seniors, juniors and freshmen, of Central high school, and was followed by a vocation dialogue by Phyllis Brown and Rina Franchi; "To Our Lady of Vocations," song by the freshmen class; "The Rivals," poem, by Jean Wallace, Peggy McMahon and Doris Brown; "Nuns Are Peonies," by Philomena DeArchangelis; "America, The Beautiful," selection by the orchestra, and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Last week, 400 more names were added to the board by J. E. Dennison, Eugene Howell, Albert Humbertson and A. L. Brown. Some of the spaces in the alphabetical arrangement are already filled.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

JOHN DANVER gave orders to pass Bruce Martin and Mary's room-mate and friend onto the plant grounds. He was busy—the atmosphere in the F. B. I. offices was tense as a cracked whip—but not too busy to see them. He would be criticized for allowing Bruce Martin entrance on this night of all nights. But Bruce Martin had said, "I've got to see you now!" And he believed him. He believed him most of the time in the face of contrary evidence.

He dismissed the reporting officer with last instructions. They had checked over the preparations. Every precaution had been taken to avert serious damage to the plant while waiting to allow every inside agent to function and thus reveal himself. He wondered if his usual had fooled the local sabotage chief. He wished he had transferred Joe Banks into transportation a week or so ago. Might have looked less planted than this abrupt shift on the eve of the shipment. Banks had turned in the report all right—but how much weight did it carry with the leader?

And then Bruce, Fran and Burke came in. Bruce said, "Danver, there'll be an attempt to sabotage Nordex tonight."

Danver swayed back in his swivel chair as though struck. It was the answer to his questions. Then he swung forward to fix Bruce with a hard glance. "What makes you think that?"

Bruce gave a dry chuckle. "That's sticking my neck out, isn't it? Well, I have been guilty and don't know it. I'll tell you all about it later. All you need to know now is this—I haven't gone to Cro's to see Miss Vaughn. But every time I have gone—there's been sabotage here at Nordex. The last time I was supposed to go, I refused at the eleventh hour, and came over and took up that plane without orders."

Danver admitted sharply, "Every thing WAS set for sabotage that night."

"You see," cried Bruce, "Tonight I was to go to Cro's. I'm sure of it now. The plan fell through. But it was announced over the air that I was there."

"And you think it's a signal of some kind?"

"Don't you?"

"Well, then—" Bruce leaned across Danver's desk urgently. "Can't you warn your men? Do something?"

Danver smiled. "They're out there, on their toes, itching for action. You saw them in the invitation to this party. I'm glad to hear proof it's been accepted."

Ken, Fran and Burke gazed. But over street; Paul Edward Ritter, 306 Woodside avenue; John Edward Effland, Jr., 527 Pearre avenue; Patrick Joseph Rossi, 506 Bedford street; Floyd Anderson Price, 113 Henry street.

Bruce asked tensely, "Mary helped send it?"

Danver nodded, anxiety clouding his smile. "And I'm afraid she didn't stop when I told her to. That she went on with Joe Banks to the gang's meeting place."

"Where is it?" cried Bruce.

"In the Hollywood hills," Danver told him. "But a squad car was on its way there as soon as the address was traced. It ought to be over by now. I'm waiting for the call. That's the hardest part." He turned to the three beside Bruce, and Bruce made rapid introductions.

"Look, there must be something we can do," Bruce cried irritably. "Maybe they didn't find the hide-out. I'm going to go over there! Give me the address."

"They know the house all right," said Danver with a steely gleam in his eye. "It belongs to Tojnette Vaughn." As Bruce stared at him, he added quietly, "And if I were you, Bruce, when things start popping around here, I'd keep out of sight. The boys may be a little uncertain of what team you're on."

It was at this moment the scream of the fire alarm sounded—shot through the straining nerves of the five in the F. B. I. office like a high explosive! Danver, who had moved to the door with Bruce, turned and raced back to his phones. Almost instantly one of them rang.

"You got the man that turned it in? Good. Start for the hangar!" He dropped the receiver on its cradle. "False alarm," he snapped and picked up the next ringing phone. "False alarm," he repeated into the phone. "May be the only sideshow. Divide the boys as we planned—send the crew to the hangars!"

Bruce wheeled about and ran for the door.

"Where are you going?" Danver shouted.

"To the hangars!" yelled Bruce without turning. Ken and Burke followed him. As they rounded a corner of the cafeteria they were thrown against each other with violent impact as a flashing concussion shook the building. A burst of flames showed through the windows.

"Ha! There's another sideshow!" whistled Ken.

The scream of the fire engine followed them as they ran on. They reached the hangar, looming large and dark, by the testing field. As they neared the door they could hear the shouts of F. B. I. men—then the bark of guns!

Ken stopped at the door, breathing hard, but still thinking. "No sense in our going in there," he panted.

Announcing CHANGES IN CITY BUS SERVICE

Effective Today

On Monday, November 23rd, the number of stops made by City buses will be reduced. Only those stops as now marked by the new Bus Stop signs will be used.

This is being done in accordance with the request of the Office of Defense Transportation. Its purpose is to conserve gasoline and to reduce the wear and tear on equipment. All of these things involve materials vital to the war effort, and today new buses cannot be obtained. Our present equipment must last for the duration.

We ask your cooperation in making this program a success. We are sorry if the changes may cause you some slight inconvenience, but we know you will understand the necessity.

Town of Crellin Furnishes 43 Men For Global War

Robert Faherty, Cecil Kelley and Darrell Lewis Join Navy

OAKLAND, Nov. 22 — The town of Crellin is furnishing more than its share of young men in this global war. Three left Tuesday to join the U. S. Navy to bring the total to forty-three entering the service. They were Robert Faherty, Darrell Lewis and Cecil Kelley. Faherty, a son of Mrs. Stephen Faherty and the late Mr. Faherty, is the third of his family to enter the service. A brother, William, is at Fort Wayne, Ind., in the army air corps, while another brother Edward is at Camp Pickett, Va., with an engineering group.

Lewis is also the third one of his family to join the service and all three are Navy inclined. Stanley B. Lewis and Burrus Lewis are already in that branch of the service. They are sons of Harry Lewis, chief mechanic at the Stanley Mines. The fact that he served in the U. S. Navy in the last war may have something to do with the choice his sons made and the enthusiasm of Harry Sanders, already in the Navy and home on leave, may have had its effect. Sanders has been attending a music school in Washington, D. C., for the past several months and following his furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Sanders, he will be assigned to one of the battleships as an assistant bandmaster.

The Woodmen of the World organization at Crellin sponsored a Victory party this week in honor of their members who are now in the service of their country. State's Attorney Neil C. Praley was the principal speaker.

Hagerstown	2	1	1	.667
Martinsburg	0	3	0	.000
Handley	0	3	0	.000

What should be one of the closest and hardest-fought Thanksgiving day football battles in the history of Allegany and Port Hill high school grid rivalry is on tap Thursday afternoon at 2:30 when the local eleven, both undefeated this season, bring 1942 campaigns to a close by clashing at the Port Hill stadium.

Two championships—the city scholastic and the Cumberland Valley Athletic League—will be at stake while Coach Herman Ball's West Siders will also be seeking a share of the district title.

Allegany, which cleared the decks for the big engagement last Saturday when the Campers swept over Eddie Semler's Hagerstown high combination 33-14 at the Port Hill bowl, will carry a winning string of seventeen games extending over two seasons into the encounter.

Coach Bill Hahn's Sentinels, with a tie with Hagerstown, can take over both the city and CVAL crowns now held by Allegany, by winning Thursday's classic, which is expected to draw 6,000 or more fans.

Each Stopped LaSalle

The West Siders and Sentinels each stopped the LaSalle High Explorers in the intra-city series while in the CVAL, the Campers won three straight contests while Port Hill rang up a pair of victories and was deadlocked by Hagerstown.

The Sentinels were knocked out of the CVAL picture Saturday when Fullback Don Snyder, shooting for a new city scoring record, booted his total number of points for the season to 106 by kicking a field goal and booting four extra points from placement to increase his season total to twenty-seven.

The modern city scoring record is 114 points, established in 1935 by Derl Keller of Penn Avenue High. Snyder needs only a touchdown and an extra point to shatter the mark. Comparing the teams strictly on their records this year, Allegany appears to have a slight edge. This margin didn't begin to show, however, until after the start of the CVAL campaign.

Campers Start Early

In league battles, Allegany smothered Handley 46-6, Martinsburg 41-0 and Hagerstown 33-14 while against these same eleven, Port Hill topped Handley 12-0 and Martinsburg 27-0 and was held to a 6-6 tie by Hagerstown although the Semieries were badly outplayed.

In the race for district honors, a victory for Allegany would enable the Campers to share laurels with Coach Fred "Tack" Clark's Moorefield (W. Va.) High Yellow Jackets, who completed an unbeaten and untied season last Friday to top the Potomac Valley Conference championship. If Port Hill should take Thursday's skirmish, then the Jackets would have a clear claim to the district title due to the tie on the Sentinels' record.

Hagerstown, which came here Saturday determined to grab at least a share of the loop title, was outplayed nearly all the way with both of its touchdowns coming when the Allegany second team was in the game.

The Campers struck for two touchdowns and a safety in the first quarter, made another touchdown in the second stanza and concluded with a touchdown and a field goal in the third heat.

Cianelli Paces Hagerstown

One of the biggest thrills of the game came when Snyder got off the Camper bench and hammered a field goal over the crossbar from twenty-eight out. Allegany had the ball on the eighteen and Snyder's kick started from ten yards behind the line of scrimmage. The ten additional yards necessary to clear the upright had the total distance the ball had to travel thirty-eight yards.

Tony Cianelli, nimble Hagerstown halfback, scored both of the Hub City team's touchdowns and sliced Snyder's margin in the CVAL scoring race to three points. However, Hagerstown has finished its loop season while Snyder will have another opportunity in the Port Hill meeting.

End Don Beck tallied two of Allegany's touchdowns, one on a pass and the other on a pass interception. The other Camper scores were made by Halfback Dick Anderson, who ran fifty-eight yards and End Carl "Bus" Hammersmith, who took one of Bob Williams' pitches in the end zone.

Allegany made eleven first downs to Hagerstown's ten and gained 287 yards on the ground to the losers' ninety-six. The Semieries completed seven of twenty-one passes for eighty-five yards while Allegany connected on six of eight tosses for eighty yards.

Moorefield High Awarded Valley Conference Flag

Circuit Rules Out One of Parson's Two Wins over Thomas

MOOREFIELD, W. Va., Nov. 22.—The Moorefield High Yellow Jackets, who completed an undefeated and untied football season last Friday when they turned back the Romney High Pioneers 20-0, yesterday received official recognition as the 1942 champions of the Potomac Valley Conference.

Winners of four conference battles, the Jackets were voted the championship by principals representing seven of the loop's schools at the annual fall meeting held at Petersburg.

The vote was taken after Kenton Lambert, Parsons high coach, asked that his team be regarded as co-champion as a result of its four conference victories. The Panthers defeated Thomas twice, Keyser and Franklin.

The principals, considering the Parsons claim, ruled out one of the Thomas victories as conference regulations specify a member, to be eligible for the championship, must play a minimum of four games with four different schools.

In addition to turning back Romney, Moorefield scored over Franklin, Ridgeley and Keyser. Coaches attending the meeting submitted their all-conference team ballots and the all-star team will be announced later this month.

It was the consensus of the principals that the conference should continue interscholastic basketball with the eight-game minimum requirement to remain in effect. However, it is expected that most of the schools will reduce schedules from approximately eighteen to twenty games to twelve or fourteen.

Officers of the conference are John Dice, Franklin, president; John St. Clair, Moorefield, vice president; and Quentin Evans, Romney, secretary.

Teams represented at the meeting were Moorefield, Parsons, Romney, Franklin, Circleville, Petersburg and Bayard. Seven other members—Keyser, Ridgeley, Piedmont, Thomas, Capon Bridge, Wardensville and Mathias, were not represented.

Army-Navy Game Fever Sweeping Severn's Banks

Annapolis Prepares for Biggest Sporting Event in 49 Years

By PETE ZURLINDEN
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Football fever swept Annapolis today as this little city of 14,000 inhabitants on the banks of the Severn prepared for its brightest spot in the sport spotlight in forty-nine years.

The pulse of every one from nine to 90 quickened with the realization that Saturday the blue ribbon Army-Navy classic comes home for the first time since 1893 when the sailors notched the forty-three-year-old series' first upset, to the amazement of some 7,000 spectators.

1942 Story Is Different
Since then the Soldiers' and Sailors' spirited contests and the attendant colorful pageantry often have drawn 100,000 fans. The story this year is far different.

The war, and its transportation problems, caused President Roosevelt to order the 1942 battle played in semi-privacy, with attendance limited to persons living within ten miles of Annapolis.

Under these conditions it appears that even little Thompson stadium, Navy's home gridiron, won't be filled to its 23,000 capacity even though Annapolis townfolk plan to turn out en masse.

This year the United States Naval Academy's 3,200 midshipmen must provide all the game's color. The West Point cadets won't attend but half the midshipmen have volunteered to cheer Army regardless of Navy's ups or downs during the actual combat.

"Betting" To Be Curtailed
Midshipmen will decorate Bancroft Hall, their dormitory, with the customary "Beat Army!" posters and painted bed sheets this week, and daub fresh paint on the statue of Tecumseh, their lucky Indian chief, as the game draws near.

Like the game itself, the traditional "betting" between the Midshipmen and Cadets will be curtailed drastically because of war conditions. Due to shortages of bath-tobes, pajamas, sweaters and cuff links, the usual stakes, inter-academy wagering this year will be restricted to old caps, neckties and other token bets.

Navy will have one tangible advantage. The Tars will be playing at home before a solid Sailor crowd.

Ott Expects War To Leave Clubs Evenly Matched

Keen Competition Will Continue, Giants' Manager Says

By ELLIOTT CHAZE
NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Mel Ott, former "boy wonder" of baseball and current manager of the New York Giants, admits war will dull the caliber of big-league performance; but he says the fans will hardly notice it.

"It seems to me," Ott says, "that what the fans want most is keen competition. Well, they'll go right on getting it, because war plays no favorites and the draft will treat all clubs alike."

"So the folks will see teams perhaps less capable, but teams which are just as evenly matched as ever."

Not an 'Unusual Fellow'

Ott, who winters here in his big, comfortable suburban home, has spent more than half his life playing with the New York Giants. But he refuses to make any predictions for the New Yorkers during wartime and thinks it ridiculous anyone should suspect him of being an unusual fellow.

"Sure, I scored a lot last year. But who wouldn't have with Johnny Mize and Babe Young hitting behind him? Those fellows would push a street-car home."

There were times, however, thirty of them, when modest Mel didn't need pushing. He clumped thirty home runs to lead the National League in that department.

Best Season Since 1936

At 33, Mel feels "about as good as I ever did" and believes that last season he had in many respects his best term with the Giants since 1936. He doesn't know whether his physical machinery was clicking more smoothly or whether it was simply the fact he had no alternative but to produce.

"It was my first year managing, and I knew that what I did—or didn't do—would be reflected in the team. I think the responsibility sort of hopped me up."

Ott joined the Giants at 16 and for some time has been a little leery of his legs. He's ridden a lot of Charley horses around the bases and there have been torn ligaments and a number of things. "But they seem willing to carry on," is his puzzled appraisal of them. He hunts and golfs through the mild Louisiana winters and, nowadays, keeps an ear attuned to the New York office.

Ott is convinced he's no news story off the playing field. He says fellows like him and Carl Hubbell have been around the pasture too long to excite the people.

Pleased by Scrapbook

He thinks the only remarkable thing to happen to him recently was a three-inch thick scrapbook on the Giants' 1942 season. A 13-year-old Long Island, N. Y., girl, Jean Buckhalt, compiled the book, pasting into it individual accounts of every Giant game.

"In the front she pasted a picture of me," Mel beams. "The picture came out of a comics book and she sent a few of the funnies along with it. She said she hoped the Giants win the pennant next year."

"So do I. But that's about all I can say about them right now."

Governali Fails To Break Records

Columbia Passer Ties One Mark and Comes Close to Another

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—If Football Coach Lou Little had known what the boys in the press box knew yesterday afternoon, Paul Governali of Columbia might have set a new national record for yardage gained in a season on completed forward passes.

Making the final appearance of his college career in a game with Dartmouth at Baker field, the Columbia pitcher also tied the record for touchdown aeriels and came close to breaking it, but not until the contest was over did he know how close he came to the yardage mark.

There was only a minute left to play when Little took Governali out for the last time, with the Lions hopelessly behind, 26-13.

The aerial artist had connected for passes which brought both the Columbia touchdowns, giving him a total of nineteen scoring heaves for the season and tying the record established by Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian in 1938.

He had seen another of his tosses plucked out of the arms of its intended receiver by Ray Wolfe on the three-yard-line, an interception that spoiled Columbia's last scoring threat and kept him from setting a new touchdown mark.

But what neither Little nor Governali knew was that Paul's passes had gained 224 yards during the afternoon, bringing his season's total to 1,442 yards or just fifteen short of the record set by O'Brien in 1938 and tied by Bud Schwenk of Washington university, St. Louis, last year.

AS WILLIE PEP WON RING TITLE

Willie Pep, left, ducks under a hard right thrown by Chalky Wright in their featherweight championship bout in New York. Pep, who hails from Hartford, Conn., won the decision in fifteen rounds and the so-called featherweight championship of the world. Pep's real name is Guglielmo Papaleo.

West Virginia's College Season Ends This Week

Mountaineers' Defeat Blends into Drab Story of Grid Doings

By DICK BOYS

Associated Press Sports Writer
The Michigan State Jinx still holds, and into the West Virginia record book today goes a 7-0 defeat that blends into the drab story of college football doings in the Mountain State this season.

There'll be those who suggest "that if West Virginia hadn't fumbled" just before the Spartans scored their touchdown the final score at East Lansing Saturday might have been different.

But Michigan State piled sixty yards for the touchdown, and that's a long way to travel, regardless of how a team gets the ball.

Meanwhile, Morris Harvey was closing with a 7-0 victory over Wayneburg to wind up the first season for Cebe Ross as coach of the Eagles, and their most successful in history; and Bethany was taking its usual Saturday afternoon shellacking, this time from Geneva, 31 to 6.

Two Games Remain

With these two contests out of the way, only the curtain calls for West Virginia and Marshall remain. Marshall, which hasn't won a game this season and has little prospect for doing so, meets Bradley Tech at Huntington on Thanksgiving, and the Mountaineers play an intercollegiate contest with Miami at Florida Saturday.

In retrospect, only Morris Harvey which closed with six victories, one defeat and two ties, ran counter to expectations this season. Despite the defeat and ties, only thirteen points were scored against the Eagles who won five of their six victories by margins of two touchdowns or less. In the other games, the Rossmen pasted Bethany, 34-0. Glenville, which now boasts the second best record, won four and lost two; West Virginia and West Liberty, five and three; Fairmont won three and lost four, Tech two and four, Bethany one and five, Potomac State none and four, and Marshall won none, lost seven and was tied once.

Scoring Race Still Same

Most of the teams having closed their seasons, there were no changes last week in the race for individual scoring honors. Eddie Pie-lech of West Liberty and his teammate, Allen Blair, are first and second with forty-four and thirty-nine points, but Dick McElwee of West Virginia, who has thirty-eight, can tie for the lead by scoring a single touchdown against Miami, and win undisputed possession of first place by adding one extra point.

If he scores the touchdown, he'll likely cop first place, for he hasn't missed a placement in eleven chances this season.

Lulu Costantino Will Meet Raffa On Tuesday, Dec. 1

Contenders for Featherweight Title To Clash at Pittsburgh

By DICK BOYS

Associated Press Sports Writer
PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—With the big boys of boxing ring partially dimmed out by the war, the little fellows have taken over the interest in the fight game, and are packing them in at arenas all over the country.

The coming bout between Lulu Costantino and Sergeant Mike Raffa at the Gardens on Tuesday night, December 1, gives an indication of the hold the speedy featherweights have on fight followers in the Tri-State area.

The No. 1 and 2 contenders for the championship have caught the fancy of district boxing goers and a capacity throng is expected to sit in on their battle.

It will be the first time in years that featherweights have created so much interest in a Pittsburgh show, and a grand tribute to Costantino and Raffa, two of the best little fighters in the game today. Costantino flashed on the boxing horizon when he racked up a string of fifty-six consecutive victories before he lost a split decision to Champion Chalky Wright.

Pittsburgh fans are well acquainted with the ability of Raffa as a ring man, and look to the Fort Knox army sergeant to some day win the championship. Sergeant Mike will be facing his most formidable opponent in Lulu and a great battle is in prospect when the two enter the Gardens ring for their ten-round pairing.

Of as much interest is the ten-round semi-windup between Carmen Notch, of East Liberty, and Tony Motisi, of Chicago. Motisi is the lad who whipped Fritz Zivic last year, and if Notch is able to get past him, he will further push his claim for a much-sought after bout with Fritz.

Duquesne Upsets Villanova 6 to 0

Forest Hall Runs 60 Yards for Game's Only Touchdown

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 22.—(AP)—One perfectly executed play that sprang Forest Hall loose for a sixty-yard touchdown run in the second period gave Duquesne, a 3 to 1 underdog in the pre-game betting, a 6 to 0 victory over Villanova before 20,000 at Shibe Park today.

The play came unexpectedly after one Duquesne play had been smeared for a three-yard loss on the visitors' forty. On a "T"-formation, with the entire Duquesne backfield faking excellently, Hall took the ball from Frank Basileone on a reverse, got into the open off tackle and set sail down the sidelines with five teammates for interference. Only one Villanova man had a chance for a tackle, but Hall eluded him nicely by reversing his field on the Wildcat twenty.

Max Kleibasa's try for the extra point was blocked.

Piling up 250 yards from rushing to a minus eight the Ducks threatened on several other occasions, but were always stopped before penetrating the Villanova twenty. Early in the fourth period

Unbeaten Teams For Bowl Games Getting Scarce

Georgia and William and Mary Suffer First Defeats

By HAROLD CLASSEN
NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—If these football upsets continue, just where are the sponsors of the various Jan. 1 bowl games going to get enough teams with glittering records for their annual shows?

A season that already had more surprises than an attic trunk kicked in with the biggest of the year Saturday as four-times-beaten Auburn made a nightmare of the University of Georgia's "dream" backfield, 27 to 13.

Among the other bowl eligibles, William and Mary lost its first game but little prestige in a 14 to 0 setback by North Carolina Pre-flight and Missouri bowed once more to Fordham, 20 to 12.

Other Saturday results left Georgia Tech, Boston college and Tulsa heading the major undefeated teams, with Tennessee and Alabama also in the limelight.

Among the eleven not interested in the post season honor and cash, Ohio State's precision machine took the Big Ten title with a 21 to 7 conquest of Michigan; Wisconsin shredded the Minnesota line, 20 to 6 and Yale mastered Harvard, 7 to 3 for the Big Three top.

No upset could compare with the Georgia debacle. Earlier in the season Auburn had bowed to Florida, 6 to 0, and the "Gators in turn were massacred by Georgia, 75 to 0.

Yet Saturday the previously unbeaten Crackers were able to gain only thirty-seven yards net and the Plainsmen humiliated them even further by dumping All-America Frankie Sinkwich behind his goal with such enthusiasm that he dropped the ball and Fagan Canzonieri fell on it for a touchdown.

Georgia Tech Wins

The defeat took away some of the appeal from this week's meeting with Georgia Tech, which Saturday conquered Florida, 20 to 7, to remain unbeaten and the leading choice for the unofficial Southeastern title. Tennessee, 26 to 0 victor over Kentucky, can take second if it beats Vanderbilt Saturday, provided Tech humbles Georgia.

Alabama, with Substitute Center Bill Baughman Gambling fifty yards for one of the touchdowns, closed its loop season with a 27 to 7 verdict over the Commodores.

Victories by Ohio State and Wisconsin decided the one-two berths in the Big Ten and made third place a prize for the winner of this week's Iowa-Michigan encounter. Indiana battered Purdue for the third straight year, 20 to 0, and the Great Lakes Sailors blanked Illinois, 6 to 0.

Things continued their topsyturvy way in the Southwest loop with Windell Williams, who sometimes played end and sometimes halfback, helping Rice spill Texas Christian, 26 to 1, only a week after the Horned Frogs dumped Texas.

Southern Methodist and Baylor banged heads in a 6 to 0 deadlock but Arkansas left its dreary record at home for a 14 to 7 win over Detroit in the Motor City.

Yale's triumph over Harvard, on Tim Hoopes' sixty-two yard personal exploit, meant that the Elis won the Big Three title in Howie Odell's first year as mentor. The Hoopes touchdown also was its arch rival since 1939. The victors, who annexed only two triumphs in the preceding two years, finished 1942 with five wins and three losses.

Army Ready for Navy

Otherwise in the East, Army showed it was ready for the annual meeting with Navy by crushing the toothless Princeton Tiger, 40 to 7. Paul Governali said farewell to college football with a pair of touchdowns passes that enabled him to tie Davey O'Brien's record of nineteen for the year but the Lions lost to Dartmouth, 26 to 13; Boston College wasn't extended its routing Boston university, 37 to 0 and Holy Cross smeared Manhattan, 28 to 0.

Duke caught North Carolina State at low tide and the Blue Devils swarmed to a 47 to 0 decision in a Southern Conference clash; the Citadel also had an easy time, downing Davidson, 21 to 9; and Maryland, ahead 26 to 7 at the half, held on for a 32-28 decision over Washington and Lee. Clemson annexed the South Carolina collegiate crown by downing Furman, 12 to 7.

Stanford wallopped the disappointing California Bears, 26 to 7, and remained in Pacific Coast consideration along with Washington State, UCLA and Southern California. The Uclans stayed in the race with a 14 to 10 verdict over Washington and set up a title scramble that may not be unraveled until the Trojans and Bruins close their season on Dec. 12.

Tulsa clinched the Missouri Valley banner by downing Creighton, 38 to 19, while Oklahoma came East and lost to Temple, 14 to 7, on the same day that the Iowa Pre-flights handed Nebraska its worst defeat, 46 to 0.

Kleibasa tried a field goal from the Wildcat thirty-two, but the ball fell short of the uprights.

Thorpe Selects His Own Variety Of All-Star Team

Grange and Muller Are Only Players of Current Era

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—We've talked to Jim Thorpe, that burly, leather-faced hunk of man with the chicken tracks at the corners of his piercing dark eyes.

We've asked this football player-to-end-all-football players everything we could think of at the time, such as how far he could kick a ball, what he thought of the present-day game, and if he ever got hurt playing. To the latter query he rubbed his ankle tenderly.

"Once," he said, "I twisted this ankle a little."

But we never thought to ask him a most obvious question, to wit, his own personal nominations for an all-time all-star football team. Charles P. Ward of the Detroit Free Press wasn't so dumb. Charley asked him, and what's more, he got an answer, although it was accompanied by much hemming and hawing and maybes and perhapses.

Big Jim Goes Far Back

After pointing out to Ward that he, Thorpe, had played football twenty-three years and had seen any number of great players come and go, big Jim finally got around to naming his all-star team of the moment. Of the moment is used advisedly, as he admitted that if he were to pick a similar team five minutes hence it might not be the same team.

Anyway, here's Thorpe's team: Ends — Albert Exendine, Carlisle, and Brick Muller, California.

Tackles — Pats Henry, Washington and Jefferson, and Hector Cowen, Princeton.

Guards — Pudge Heffelfinger, Yale, and Cupid Black, Yale.

Center — Germany Schulz, Michigan.

Quarterback — Walter Eckersall, Chicago.

Halfbacks — Eddie Mahan, Harvard, and Red Grange, Illinois.

Fullback — Ted Coy, Yale.

It will be noted that only two players — Grange and Muller — come under what might be called the current era. That is, they are the only representatives of the players of the last twenty-twenty-five years. The others date back as far as the turn of the century.

Every Man Qualified

Whether big Jim was letting his memory, and the passage of time, magnify the exploits of these stars is problematical.

But there is no denying the qualifications of every man named by big Jim, and you can no more argue against his selections than you can argue that Jack Dempsey could lick Joe Louis, or vice versa. It's one of these things you never could prove, and a dog chasing its tail is pretty smart compared with a couple of guys arguing the respective merits of athletes of different generations. The pup might reach a conclusion.

Big Jim thinks Exendine, his teammate at Carlisle, was the best end he ever saw, and he puts Mahan in that class among the backs.

"Goeh," he told Ward after his selections had been piled out of him, "I've left off a lot of good men."

Which is true enough. We'd make one slight change.

We'd get a gent named Thorpe in there somewhere.

Brown and Brooks Clash for "Title"

Maryland Will Recognize Tonight's Winner as Heavy "Champion"

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP)—There's a heavyweight "championship" fight on the schedule this week, but it probably won't attract as much attention as what is considered a very ordinary heavyweight tussle between Jimmy Blinovs and Lee Savold.

The Maryland Boxing Commission has offered recognition as world heavyweight champion for the duration of the war to the winner of a fifteen-round fight at Baltimore tomorrow night between Big Boy Brown of Detroit and Lou Brooks of Wilmington, Del.

Both are regarded as promising young heavyweights, but they've had only about a dozen professional bouts apiece. So far the only way either has even been connected with the title is that Brown is a cousin of Sergeant Joe Louis, who is pretty generally recognized as the champion not only for the duration but until somebody comes along who can lick him, all talks of retirement to the contrary.

Bivins, who recently moved up from the light-heavyweight class, and the veteran Savold aren't even thinking of titles in connection with their ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden, Friday. In recent starts, the Cleveland negro has whipped Tami Mauriello and Bob Pastor. Savold, who once was knocked practically out of the heavyweight picture when he was knocked out by Harry Bobo, has

Two Free State Teams Win Final Games of Season

Liners Top Generals, Terrors Trim Curtis Bay Coast Guard

By FRED STABLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer
Three of Maryland's collegiate football teams closed their seasons Saturday, clearing the decks for the only remaining Free State contest on the 1942 schedule, the Army-Navy classic at Annapolis.

The University of Maryland Old Liners concluded their highly successful first season under Clark Shaughnessy with a 32-28 victory over Washington and Lee at College Park, while Western Maryland trimmed the Curtis Bay Coast Guardsmen at Westminster 28 to 6 and Johns Hopkins absorbed its fourth licking against Drexel Tech, 29 to 6, at Philadelphia.

With the victory over the Generals, a surprisingly tough game in view of past performances this season, the College Park boys sported a season's record of seven wins and two losses, the best count the Old Liners have had in a coon's age.

Western Maryland brought its season's record up to the 500 mark, with four wins, four losses and one tie, for its best record in a number of years.

Generals Stage Rally

The "T" formation boys started off against Washington and Lee as if they intended to stage a touchdown marathon. Three six pointers and two extra points were battered across in the opening

As soon as North heard about his partner's strong support for spades, he properly became slam-minded. But see what he did about it. By force of habit, he used his Blackwood 4-No Trumps to ask South how many aces he had.

After South answered with 5-Hearts to show two aces, poor North was in a quandary, indeed. He didn't know which two aces South held. If hearts and diamonds, even a grand slam might be in the cards. But if South had the two minor aces, there might not even be a small slam. Taking a chance, North bid 6-Spades, and was down two tricks when East led the heart J.

After South's 3-Spades, North should have invited slam by bidding his blank club suit—a particularly enlightening bid if you are using Blackwood, as it betokens extreme distribution and asks your partner what aces he has elsewhere. South in this case would have shown his diamond A. North then should sign off at 4-Spades, and put it up to South if he had a second-round stopper in hearts to bid small slam, an invitation which he would have refused by passing the 4-Spades. With the heart A instead of the club A, South should have then bid grand slam, if his main other strength were outside of the club suit.

Local Soldiers Perform Rescue Work in England

Capt. Dickey's Detail Revives Persons Overcome by Coke Fumes

A detail of thirty Maryland soldiers, commanded by Capt. Howard Dickey, of Cumberland, have received commendation from their commanding officer for first-aid rescue work during a church service in a small English town where the pastor, the pastor's wife, the organist and a half dozen members of the congregation were overcome by fumes from a coke furnace.

A story of the heroic work of the American soldiers appeared on the front page of yesterday's Baltimore Sun and carried the byline of Lee McCordell, staff correspondent.

The soldiers, according to McCordell, had participated in a parade which was the municipal celebration of Armistice day and were attending services in the church when the fumes crept into the choir and around the altar.

Stricken Are Carried Out
Those in the church were unaware of the deadly gas until the organist fainted. The pastor, his wife and others in the front pews collapsed a moment later.

Led by Sgt. Jack Cunningham, of Hagerstown, and Floyd Buckingham, of Annapolis, the Marylanders carried the stricken from the building.

Some placed their overcoats on the ground. Others covered the unconscious with their coats and administered first aid while ambulances and civilian defense rescue squads were called.

All were revived. The soldiers took many to their homes in army jeeps. The incident was regarded as minor by the soldiers.

Marylanders Lauded
No report was made to force headquarters many miles distant until the organization commander received a grateful letter from the county clerk lauding the conduct of the Marylanders.

"I wish to take this opportunity to pay my personal tribute to the ready way in which non-commissioned officers and men of an American contingent responded to the call for assistance, discarded their overcoats to cover the more serious casualties and generally were most helpful," was the wording of the letter.

The commanding officer forwarded the letter to Maj. Arthur Sheppe, with covering communication expressing his own compliments to the soldiers.

Anti-Poll Tax Bill Is Backed By Rubber Union

Burkhart Urges Maryland Senators To Attend Meeting Today

Local No. 26, United Rubber Workers of America, has telegraphed Senators Millard E. Tydings and George L. Radcliffe urging them to attend the Senate meeting today "to invoke the cloture rule and insure passage of the Anti-Poll Tax bill." The telegrams were signed by Raymond C. Burkhart, union president.

If approved the cloture rule would limit debate on the measure but such a motion must be backed by a two-thirds vote and reports from Washington indicate proponents of the measure will not be able to muster that much support. Backers of the bill have agreed not to press for consideration if the cloture rule fails of passage.

The Burkhart message further states:

"Any discrimination against Americans that is based on prejudice because of race, creed or color is not Constitutional Democracy and is an aid to Hitler and the axis powers.

"Anything that harms freedom of thought and action harms democracy.

"Denying the rights of free citizens of one state to enjoy the same privileges as those of another so far as national elections are concerned is contrary to the spirit of the Constitution."

Stickers Denote Services
As the troop takes part in one of the many services of national importance, a suitable sticker will be sent to the troop for one of the little squares. It will be necessary for the troop to report the service they perform. The posters, twelve feet long and eighteen feet wide, are made of heavy cardboard, and may be obtained at Boy Scout headquarters, Union street building, or from district chairmen or commissioners.

According to Raymond C. Lator, scout executive of Potomac Council, the national council is recognizing fifteen different services which scouts in various parts of the country have been called upon to perform during the past two years.

15 Services Listed
The services, numbered one to fifteen, include: Defense poster distribution, aluminum collection, consumers' pledge against waste, waste paper collection, treasure hunt for rubber, salvage campaign, food for victory, air raid poster distribution, civilian defense service, dispatch bearer service, victory bond collection, U.S.O. co-operation, American Red Cross co-operation, defense housing service and war savings pledge campaign.

A majority of these services have been performed by troops in Potomac council and troops entitled to stickers may obtain same by sending a report to scout headquarters and stickers will be ordered immediately.

The hard-working scouts are wooed by every government agency. The reason: everything the 1,500,000 Boy Scouts and Cubs undertake reaches astronomical statistics of success.

Stations To Check County Deer Kill
Four will be established in Allegany; Hunters Must Report

Nine deer checking stations will be established in Western Maryland four in Allegany county and five in Garrett county — when the open season on deer gets under way Monday, December 7, Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, announced yesterday.

Minke indicated that two of the stations will be located on the Uhl highway and two on Route 40 east of Cumberland. The definite locations will be announced within the next ten days, Minke said.

The establishment of stations in Garrett and Allegany counties is similar to the plan adopted by West Virginia.

Those who kill deer during the six-day season, December 7 to 12, inclusive, are required to report at the station most convenient for them to reach before they return home.

The law requires that hunters report on deer kills within twenty-four hours after the buck has been bagged.

Deer are reported to be plentiful in Garrett county and a new record will likely be established there during the approaching season.

BOY SCOUT CITATION — The above Victory Service citation, printed in red, white and blue, is being awarded to Boy Scout troops as a recognition of National War Service projects.

These fine new posters called "Victory Service Plaques" are now being distributed throughout Potomac Council which comprises Boy Scout troops in Garrett and Allegany counties and six counties in nearby West Virginia. As a troop takes part in one of the many services of national importance, such as salvage campaign, dispatch bearer service, U.S.O. co-operation, aluminum collection, waste paper collection, civilian defense service, etc., a suitable sticker will be sent to the troop for one of the little squares. Troops must report the services they give to scout headquarters here. The national council is recognizing fifteen different services which scouts have been called upon to perform during the past two years.

Potomac Council Troops Get Plaques As Citations for National Services

Stickers Are Added to Large "V" Poster as Services Are Performed

Boy scouts are doing their part for the war effort and they're doing it in a big way.

No longer do they search for sticks to rub together to start campfires. Now they hunt trash conveyances—trash to collect.

As a means of encouraging the boys to perform useful services so necessary to our country at this time, a "Victory Service Plaque" has been prepared for each troop to designate the various services it is performing in the interest of helping win the war for the United Nations.

These fine new posters are now being distributed among the troops of Potomac Council, which includes Garrett and Allegany counties in Maryland and six counties in nearby West Virginia.

The citation, printed in red, white and blue, contains a large "V" and a series of little squares along either side of the letter.

As the troop takes part in one of the many services of national importance, a suitable sticker will be sent to the troop for one of the little squares. It will be necessary for the troop to report the service they perform. ## Man Is Rescued From Will's Creek In "Strange" Case

Crawled through Sewer in Effort To Secure Help

A man was "fished" out of Will's creek last night about 10:45 o'clock in what police described as a "very unusual" case.

Here's how it happened: Connors was standing on North Mechanic street opposite the Eagles home when he heard a faint call of "help, help." Connors naturally looked around but could not see anyone in distress. About fifteen minutes later he again heard the eerie cry coming from some nearby place.

Connors again looked around but to no avail. Finally he walked back through an area way to the Will's creek flood wall. Lo, and behold, fifteen feet below stood a man covered with slime and weakly asking a helping hand from the stream.

Connors called the police and they in turn called the fire department for a ladder to rescue the unlucky man. At police headquarters the man, Philip Dickel, about 40, of Barreille, told Detective R. Emmett Flynn that he was pushed into the creek by someone.

Later he changed his story and said he could not remember how he got into the stream. Further questioning revealed that Dickel had stood on a narrow ledge between the wall and water for about three hours. Several times he crawled into a sewer outlet which courses beneath Mechanic street.

After crawling through the muck and slime for at least thirty feet he found he could not reach the manhole cover on the street above. He said he yelled for help three or four times then returned to his precarious perch along the stream.

Dickel was admonished to stay in Barreille if the best he could do was end up in Will's creek on visits to Cumberland. Besides Flynn and Connors several firemen and Assistant Chief John Treiber aided in rescuing Dickel.
